Seven Deadly Sins Put Onto Canvas By Noted Painter

NEW YORK.—What are the "seven deadly sins?"

An artist has put them on canvas. He is Paul Cadmus who says: "Intimate and prolonged study of the seven deadly sins might, I thought, make a better man of me—but I am just as bad as to begin with."

But that was just a little whimsical talk, for it's easy to see that Cadmus isn't very bad when one talks with him.

Cadmus' pictures were put on exhibition in the Midtown galleries here and, as was expected, stirred up as much controversy as his work has done regularly in the past.

Second Show

This was only his second one-man show in oils; the first was in 1937, but at that time he was already widely known for pictures of girls with sailors—and very unfair he was to sailors, the navy complained.

He was 40 in 1944 when he started the present series. He had been taking notes about the deadly sins for some time. "I know no one who is free of them," he says, and adds: "In every case friends of mine have come in handy. But the most useful object of study was myself, and in a way the series is autobiographical."

Cadmus lists the seven deadly sins as pride, lust, envy, gluttony, sloth, anger and avarice. In Roman Catholic theology, the last two are identified as wrath and covetousness.

In the exhibition the various sins were not identified. Cadmus thinks visitors were more interested in guessing which is which, or in letting their conscience be their guide. He hoped the series would go entire to one purchaser, and though he was not optimistic about it, he further hoped the purchaser will be a church.

Lists Worst Sins

The worst sins, he says, are those which do the most harm to others. He places pride at the head of the list. A friend suggested that, for this one, he simply put a frame around a mirror and let pride confront its own image. The difficulty was to intensify its interpretation beyond mere vanity, which seems to him comparatively innocent.

Though lust enjoys a considerable ill fame, Cadmus regards it as not too harmful. Gluttony hurts no one but the glutton. Lust is more common among men, sloth among women, he finds. And he has a particularly low opinion of avarice, "the loneliest of all sins." For an eighth sin, he suggests immoderation, but he believes it's really the evil part of the other seven.

Trainmen Delay Schedule To Pot-Shoot at Game

ONSLOW, IOWA.—It took an Iowa conservation officer to discover why a freight train required two hours to travel two miles.

Reporting on the case of the late branch-line freight, Officer Louis E. Lemke said he found that the train was stopping at likely-looking spots while crewmen fired at game from atop its boxcars. They would then get off the train, pick up their kill, and in some instances clean it before proceeding.

Receiving complaints from farmers about the shooting, Lemke watched the train one day from a near-by farmhouse with a pair of binoculars.

Lemke said he flagged the six-car train a short time later and went through it. He said he found nine rabbits and three quail.

Since he reported the incident to a Chicago & North Western Railroad official, Lemke said, there have been no more reports of shooting.

No charges were filed. There is no provision in Iowa law prohibiting shooting from a train as there is from an automobile on a public road, Lemke said.

Isotopes Are to Be Used On Oysters' Eating Choice

BEAUFORT, N. C.—The federal atomic energy commission and the fish and wildlife service are going to try to radio-activate oysters here. The AEC hopes to learn more from the experiment than it did in the A-bomb tests at Bikini.

The fish and wildlife service's part in the project will be to determine what an oyster likes to eat. In a huge building used before the war as a biological laboratory, the oysters will be fed artificially.

Tiny amounts of radioactive chemical substances from the AEC's isotope division at Oak Ridge, Tenn., will be shot into the tanks along with organisms which scientists believe appeal to an oyster's appetite.

As the organisms grow, they absorb the isotopes and the oysters will be eating the "hot" food.

Isotopes can be traced. Thus the food taken in by the oysters, digested and incorporated in their tissues, may be determined chemically and by radiation measurement.

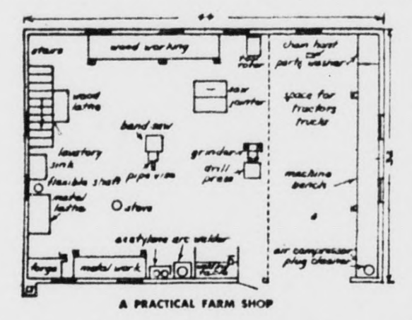
Farm Shop Layout Adds More Space

More Equipment Added As Skill Is Increased

The shop layout, sketched by Harold E. Gulvin, New York teacher of vocational agriculture, includes spaces for more equipment than most farmers plan to put in their shops; but he has observed, he says, that farmers rapidly obtain more equipment as they become skilled in handling their own repair and construction work.

In describing the farm shop in the book, "Welding Helps for Farmers," published by the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding foundation, Cleveland 1, Ohio, states that this plan is the result of many years of experience in working in and examining many farm shops, and makes the following suggestions:

For storage space, many drawers should be installed under the benches. The walls can be used to hang other tools where they can easily be seen and reached. The heating stove is placed in the corner near the smokestack provided for the forge.



A PRACTICAL FARM SHOP

The entire right side of this shop plan is for tractors and trucks. There is a handy chain hoist for raising heavy machinery opposite the large overhead outside door. The air compressor and the welder are close to the outside door so that tires can be inflated and machines can be welded without having to drive into the shop. The arc welder should have sufficient welding cable to reach well over the repair area.

The combination of an arc welder, an acetylene torch, a blacksmith's forge, a heavy-duty grinder, a drill press, and a metal lathe are all included in this shop and are grouped together. The grinder and drill press are installed on a supporting post, allowing the grinding and drilling of long pieces. The pipe vise is attached to another supporting post.

Safety Shield May End Power Line Accidents

It is beginning to appear that the end of power line accidents may be approaching faster than anyone believed, for manufacturers of farm equipment are now producing power line safety shields that cannot be removed when the shaft is in operation.

These shields may be opened for servicing and inspection of the power shaft, but they cannot be removed unless the operator goes to work on them with a blowtorch or a chisel—and nobody expects that to happen.

For many years the maunfacturers of farm machinery have been providing shields for power lines, but many farmers have failed to keep the standard shield in place despite the fact that rapidly-revolving power take-off shafts are a never-present hazard.

Fertilizer Shortage Seen As Imminent This Spring

Farmers cannot buy all the fertilizer they want when they want it during the coming spring, according to H. J. L'Hote, supervisor of the Missouri fertilizer inspection service.

He explained that the fertilizer industry is geared to furnish farmers as much fertilizer as they want for the 1950 crops if they fill their needs early. Industry has run out of storage space early.

Old Company Rules Proved Boon to Courting Workers

NEW YORK.—The A.T.&T. company's researchers have come upon a set of rules promulgated in 1880 by a store in Amboy, Ill., for the guidance of its employees—rules which allowed, among other things, one night each week for courting and another for attending prayer meeting.

The complete set of rules were as follows:

1. The store must be open from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M.
2. The store must be swept, counters, shelves and showcases dusted; lamps trimmed and chimneys cleaned; pens made; doors and windows opened; a pail of water and a bucket of coal brought in before breakfast.
3. The store must not be opened on the Sabbath unless necessary and then for only a few minutes.
4. The employe who is in the habit of smoking Spanish cigars, being shaved at the barber's, going to dances and other places of amusement, will assuredly give his employer reason to be suspicious of his integrity and honesty.
5. The employe must pay not less than $5 a year to the church and must attend Sunday school regularly.
6. Men employes are given one evening a week for courting and two if they go to prayer meeting.
7. Leisure hours should be spent mostly in reading.

Patrons 'On Own' When Students Do Beauty Work

FRANKFORT, KY.—If you let a beauty college student work on you, it's at your own risk, according to a ruling by Kentucky's court of appeals.

The ruling was made in the case of a Louisville woman, Mrs. Jewel Gill, 915 S. First street. Mrs. Gill charged that Robert Beckham, a GI student at the Louisville college of beauty culture, injured her scalp in giving her a permanent wave.

She filed suit in Jefferson circuit court seeking $1,500 in damages and $44 for medical costs. A circuit court jury awarded her $544, but the court of appeals voided the award by its ruling which said the customer must assume the risk of the student's inexperience.

FISHING AND BOATING FACILITIES ON EASTERN SHORE ABOUT READY

Cape Charles, Jan. 18.- Another major recreational asset for Virginia is rapidly nearing completion at Kiptopeke, where $2,750,000 is being expended on new ferry terminals, a yacht harbor and a fishing pear. Other major resort facilities that will supplement those at Cape Charles, will be added. Kiptopeke is not far distant from the gulf stearm and for several years local sports fishing guides have been developing marlin and dolphin fishing that is drawing larger crowds annually.

The new Kiptopeke Beach project has been brought about through improvements instituted by the Virginia Ferry Corporation, whose boats connect Norfolk with the Eastern Shore. Through the construction of a new harbor at Kiptopeke, the company will reduce the distance and time for ferrying passengers across the Chesapeake The company's boats are a connecting link in the Ocean Highway, running from the North to Florida through Virginia.

The opening of Kiptopeke Beach terminals has been set for mid-March, according to Captain L. H. Garrison, general manager of the ferry company. He has also stated that fishing parties traveling to the Eastern Shore for its famous ocean fishing and beaches will be able to board charter boats directly from the new pier.

Kitchens of Nation Held New Frontier For American Youth

SAN FRANCISCO.—There is a new frontier for America's young men—and it is in America's kitchens. That's the considered opinion of Bill Harmon, 34, who is chef at the Mark Hopkins hotel here.

He says the culinary craft is wide open for any young talent who may be interested.

The old, imported chefs are dying off, he points out, and adds, logically enough, that someone will have to take the place of each.

"More than ever before, Americans want good food," Harmon asserts. "There is better food than ever to sell them. What we lack is trained manpower."

He suggested that if this manpower ever appears, America can easily lead the world in the quality of its food.

"The tip on this is in the sauces we make these days. In Europe they rarely had the prize beef and other raw materials that we have to work with. They got their flavor from strong sauces. Today we get the flavor from the food itself rather than from the sauce because we have better food to work with."

Harmon thinks all that's needed is to make boys aware of the opportunities that await them in the big kitchens back of the nation's better dining halls.

"Cooking as a career offers 100 per cent employment," he asserts. "I could work around the clock seven days a week if I could take it." No good chef is ever out of a job.

"In the second place, wages are better. We start untrained apprentices at $5.83 a day and remember that includes free meals and laundry. An apprentice serves two years, learning the various stations around the kitchen—salads, butcher shop, cold meats, vegetables, bakery, fry station, roasts and broils and desserts.

"After two years he is an assistant cook, starting at $10.83 a day with meals and laundry. He can go up as fast after that as he is good at his work. I think it takes five years to make a really good chef."

Harmon prefers boys fresh from high school. "I'd much rather have a completely green apprentice than one somebody else has trained."
